Blairmore Patriotic Fund

Following is a list of contributions received by the Blairmore Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund for the month of August and the total amounts from January 1st to August 31st, 1917:

While few believe that the Germans will undertake to penetrate to the Russian capital over an inhospitable arctic territory almost impassable by armies, nevertheless, the news is considered serious, for it shows that the Russian army is far from the recovery which has been so often predicted.

The abandonment of the city of Riga became necessary when, through the instability of Russian regiments, the Germans were able to cross the Dvina river at Uskull, thus threatening the road to Petrograd from the southwest, while another army advanced across the Rivil marshes and along the shore of the Gulf of Riga towards the town.

The penetration of the Russian positions at Uskull is similarly likely to make necessary a rearrangement of part of the remaining Russian lines.
The abandonment of the Gulf gives the Germans another sensible to operate in the Baltic, and much nearer the Gulf of Finland. Its uses, however, are limited by conditions which will prevail later, while it is practically certain that all Russian naval vessels will make their escape to the north.

Farmers, Miners And Railway Men Exempt

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—Exemption tribunals under the military service act have been pretty well located and the number, upwards of eleven hundred, apportioned as follows: Ontario 427, Quebec 300, Manitoba 93, Saskatchewan 57, Alberta 110, British Columbia 74, New Brunswick 47, Nova Scotia 91, Prince Edward Island 15, and the Yukon 2. When the exemption tribunals shall have been constituted and a considerable time will be required for details, a proclamation will be issued calling out the men of the first class to service.
As far as we can be learned the regulations in regard to exemptions will be broad. The policy of the government is to make it clear that agriculturalists, miners, fishermen, transportation workers and all others engaged in any essential industry are to be exempted from conscription.

Dynamiter Makes

A Full Confession

Montreal, Sept. 5.—Joseph Tremblay, one of the men arrested in connection with the dynamiting of Lord Atholstan's residence at Carterville, confessed to the authori-near Lord Atholstan's house, having been forced to do so by Hand-field (who committed suicide to avoid arrest), and Mr. Monette, who is still being hunted by the detectives, and he put it several the whole family would have been Monette killed Payette, a farmer

ULTIMATE OUTCOME OF WAR DEPENDS UPON EFFICIENCY

ALLIES OF FREEDOM MUST CONQUER OR SUBMIT

French Minister of War Warns Nation That The Determination To Win Must Last To Supreme Hour Of Victory, No Matter How Hard May Be Trials Still To Be Endured

M. Painlevé, French minister of war, in a recent debate in the French chamber said in part:

"Let us not tire of repeating, for it is the truth, and it is a truth which is our glory and yesterday and our certainty of tomorrow's victory—it is the entire force of Germany which the French and English armies have had to face during these last months."

"Well, look at the map; compare the driving line as it was in the beginning of March and as it is today. Not one foot of ground have we stepped back. Along the whole front it is the enemy who has given way. It is now that, in our ports, there is disarming quiet. Out of loss of man or horse or gun, the first legion of the powerful American army, whose brave and vigorous soldiers have been slain, yesterday."

"Surely, cruel trials still await us; the reason that shall deliver future humanity is bloody; but these trials we shall surmount with constancy and stoicism. What shall we do? The chances and changes of the battle of the morrow? Shall we beat down German forces whose numbers are still so great? Shall we be able to win it all back once more beneath our thrust? That is the future's secret, but there is one thing we can declare now and with certainty—the firmness of our souls depends on the future, we have nothing to fear from the truth."

"Yes, faults, grave faults, were committed in the course of the last offensive. Yes, the losses were paid by the offensive—of which, however, we must be sure to not derate the importance—were paid too dear. Yes, losses and heavy losses were underwritten. What shall we do? The losses of killed and wounded and prisoners, which mischances who, started in the night, were circulated through Paris and France—but yet losses too cruel, because they might have been avoided, and must be avoided henceforth."

"Often our epoch has been compared with that of the Revolution. There is the great difference, then, then marched over the world, they knew the joy of new horizons and the triumph of the liberated cities acclaiming the tricolor flag and the soldiers in wooden shoes who bore the banner of the hussars of liberty. Our own soldiers have to live at the same pace, the same blood, the same sweat, day fighting, resisting, dying. History will tell how they have reached the limit of human courage and the very monotony of their sacrifice adds to its grandeur."

"Conquer or submit," says President Wilson. Yes, conquer or submit—that is the alternative, there is no other. "Submit to what? To some compromise, modest but tolerable? Not at all, but to the alternative, there is no other, most degrading serfdom. Tomorrow, let us seem to give way, let a revolution seem to arise, the solid block of our military force, and you will see at once, instead of the winking German, the German pan-German grime. There would not be a future hour when the French pan-German grime, and the French workman in his workshop would not be laboring, as an expression that is old has it, for the King of Prussia."

"Look around you, among our friends as well as among our enemies—no nation has more perfect order than that which has reigned in France or greater liberty. This must be a neutral zone, an hour of victory, no matter how hard may be the trials we still have to endure. And if one of those hearts of whom Kerensky speaks in the burning words of his proclamation should allow the mastery of you dragging us, and when will you say that you have reached the aim? I would answer, no, the mastery words of the president of the United States: 'We shall attain our end and cease to fight the democratic cause is safe.'"

No More Cuts in Holland
A Dutchman's import of tulip bulbs, whose place of business is in New York, but whose family lives in Holland, received a letter from his mother recently, which said: "With plenty of money it is impossible for me to get enough to eat and poor little boy, who is now in the hands of the government for Germany. There are no rats any more in Holland. I have sent money and sent to Germany for furs of which they are, as you know, in great need. The latter are very scarce, as are no dogs in Germany—every domestic animal pet has to give up its life for the fatherland. What more can I do? It will be impossible to import tulip bulbs this year, as Germany is using them for chemicals and fodder."

Return of Prisoners
The new arrangements between the British and German governments concerning the return of prisoners of war, or their removal in certain cases to a neutral country, are unlikely to affect Canadian prisoners, the Canadian Associated Press understands, for some time. There will be many prisoners from English corps, such as those taken at Mons, who will receive repatriation orders. Therefore, although many Canadians have been in captivity for almost two years, they cannot be dealt with for some time.

All-Sufficiency Of Our Empire

All Parts of British Empire Contribute to the Food Supply
The question then arises, to what extent can the empire supply its own needs? In attempting an answer, I would first point out that its position is unique. Never before in history has an empire covered so wide a range of climates or soils. From West to East, from the North Pole and North and South it extends from Arctic to Antarctic. Of all existing states it covers the widest tropical and subtropical areas. Somewhere within its boundaries are the principal sources of the world's supply every vital need of civilized man.

Let us take a few of the more important foodstuffs; all the wheat the empire needs can be supplied by Canada, Australia, and India; all the meat by Australia, New Zealand and Ceylon; all the tea by India; all the cereals by West India and Ceylon. The sugar-producing areas of India, the West Indies, Mauritius, Natal, and Australia produce more, and more than all, the cane sugar needed. Had we in Great Britain an industrial policy worthy of the name, we could have produced 1,300,000 tons of beet sugar which we imported from Germany and Austria in 1913, and about 1,000,000 tons of cotton for Cuban sugar and be limited to 3-4 lb. a week today. The Palm Kernels of West Africa could supply us with all the margarine and the dairy farms of Canada and New Zealand with all the butter and cheese we require. The list might be multiplied almost indefinitely; but enough has been said to prove that the empire can be self-sustained. —Sir George Macgill, Bart., in Nineteenth Century.

British Pride and Patience Although Prisoners of War, They Preserved Their Good Humor

René Arosio, in a letter to a Chicago newspaper, describes the experiences of British and French prisoners of war who have recently been transferred to the United States. The writer defines the prisoner's life as composed of good and bad days. "On the good days," he writes, "I lived through some hours. Our greatest pleasure was to hear the news of the front from those we loved; the duration of our captivity, the absence of news from our families, the uncertainty and insecurity in which we lived exercised a fatal influence over our minds. At such times, the grimmer and bitter, disputes were frequent between our comrades in misfortune. The sight of these misadventures caused us to look away from which took long to recover."

"It seemed to me that, of all the prisoners, the English got on the best together. Their solidarity was admirable. Though they were not all French, they were, they preserved their steady good humor, and their pride was conforming to see."

Honesty Not Dead The Man Who Would Not Accept Under Profits

Honor and honesty are not quite dead, even in a world where capital is invested. Also, as straw shows which way the wind blows, this little story may contain some of the best evidence that honesty is not dead. A certain man, too old to volunteer but not too old to have two stalwart young brothers at the front, has money invested in a company that has been making millions as a side line. Not long ago the dividend came in and he was started to find that his check was out of all proportion to the amount of money invested and much larger than he had ever received. He fired his objections with the management, but was asked if he supposed the company was in the munition business for the good of its health. Exposure seemed impracticable and of little avail, and the use of the ill-won surplus was impossible. So a certain branch of the Red Cross found itself enriched by one man refused to profit by legalized theft.

University Students in German Army
Of a total of 42,000 German University students called to the colors up to the conclusion of last fall and winter, 6,000 have been reported as killed, according to Berlin received at Copenhagen from Advers. Berlin University was represented in Germany's fighting ranks by 5,285 men, of whom 500 are dead. Bonn University supplied 3,647, of whom 364 are killed. The figures for some other universities follow: Heidelberg 1,640, of whom 164 are killed; Munich 2,555 called up, ten per cent killed; Leipzig 3,700 called up, 644 killed.

Rather Personal
Tingler-Jack, that's the second time I've heard you use the phrase "Tingler-Jack." You would tell me how a veldt can ache? —Jack—Well, not to speak of a hollow veldt, but you sometimes have headaches.

A Moral Bankrupt

Germany Has Utterly Lost Faith and Confidence of the World

After three years of war, we hear a great deal about German manpower being exhausted. There is no reason to believe that Germany is being exhausted at the point of collapse. That Germany's food supply is failing, everybody knows; that her munition industries are ruined, is not denied; that her shipping and commerce have suffered blows from which it will take generations to recover, is admitted by German business men. It is not strange that they are reported to be urging peace as an imperative necessity if anything is to be saved out of the wreck. But Germany has to maintain today a greater loss than any of her moral assets. At a time when she needs to call up all her reserves of good faith and confidence, she finds that they have been wasted in a badly believed in. Nobody trusts her. Upon the German government the disagreeable evidence that it is morally bankrupt is being pressed from every quarter. This is the indisputable truth which stands out in the reception of peace proposals by Germany. They meet with almost universal skepticism and suspicion. This would not be the case if Germany stood at present in the position which she occupied in the world's estimation at the beginning of 1914. If at that time we had had a specific resolution adopted by the German Reichstag, a declaration by the German chancellor, emphatic, renewed, explained, we should all have said there was something seriously to be reckoned with. It would have been the German which we thought we were dealing with. It would have been reasonable to believe that. But three years have sufficed to destroy that presumption. It is Germany herself who has made the world to look upon her as a liar. A long course of lawlessness, hoped upon duplicity, of brutality, of unprovoked aggression, of every utterance of the German government suspected. Hence, the amazed, the puzzled, the suspicious, the public men and the press in all belligerent and neutral countries have taken upon the German government the result of the campaign to eliminate food waste. Canada and the United States are sending three months' supplies necessary to be imported.

"It is in the homes of the province of Ontario that the great battles we are to face will have to be fought and won," declares Sir William Osler, chief of the Ontario food controllers' food conservation campaign. There is an article of diet of which there are large stocks in storage in Canada and for which there has been practically no demand. This commodity is frozen poultry.

This unusual situation this year has been caused through the shortage of ocean tonnage. A large part of the stock on hand had been sold for export but could not be transported owing to the unavailability of refrigerated space.

Canadian consumers, in the past, have not taken kindly to frozen meats. This has been due, in part at least, to lack of suitable facilities for defrosting, which if not properly done results in the meat being discoloured and unattractive. The time has arrived, however, when it may be necessary for consumers to rely more and more upon frozen meat products. In times of scarcity every advantage should be taken of the facilities provided to carry over the surplus from one season to the shortage of another. Properly defrosted poultry, for instance, is equally as wholesome and nutritious as fresh-killed stock.

The public is invited, therefore, to ask for frozen poultry, of which there is a large supply consisting of chickens, broilers, ducks, geese, and turkeys. The trade advice that many of these varieties can be obtained at prices considerably lower than those prevailing for fresh-killed stock at present available.

It is given as a suggestion that frozen poultry could be utilized economically as a substitute for beef and bacon on Tuesdays and Fridays. If special poultry or frozen meat days were arranged and individual retailers had prospects of handling a certain quantity, they could order accordingly and all arrangements be made for the necessary marketing.
As there is practically no other market for frozen poultry at the present time, it would appear to be of distinct advantage to this country, in assisting to conserve its food products of other sorts, that poultry meat be utilized, insofar as possible, in the way suggested.

The Canadian Army Medical Corps

Probably few people in everyday life realize just what position the Army Medical Corps occupies in the gigantic military machine, now fighting against Germany. Many have the idea that when the fighting is all over, the stretchers bearers proceed to the field of battle, and pick up the wounded, in safety, and that this work comprises practically the sum total of the efforts of the corps in question. Such, however, is not the case. True it is that the men of the A.M.C. do pick up the wounded on the battlefield, and give their wounds whatever attention is possible under the circumstances, but often this work is done under the greatest difficulty and danger. Shells and bullets are no respecters of persons, and the Red Cross men are constantly exposed to danger, and without the thrill which helps to keep men of the fighting units up under the stress of battle. But as previously indicated, there are many other lines of endeavor, which are looked after by men in this arm of the service. Among others are the Field Dressing Stations, Collecting Depots, Field and Base Hospitals, and Motor Ambulances. Another very important branch is that of sanitation. When one considers the freedom from disease which is enjoyed by our armies today, and compare this record with that of previous wars, the efficiency of this branch of the A.M.C. will be readily appreciated.

Every month 100 men are called for, from Canada, for service with the Army Medical Corps overseas, and of this number Alberta is called on to supply 40.
This is a tribute to the training given to the Alberta men at Training Depot No.
13, which is now carried on at Sarcee Camp. The work, which is of an interesting nature, and likely to be useful to anyone in after life, includes squad and company drill, physical training, stretcher drill, first-aid, bandaging, and the superintending of sanitary conditions. Great emphasis is laid on first-aid to the injured, and lectures as well as practical instruction in this work are given by men who know this subject thoroughly.
There is, at the present time, a greater need of men than ever before, for this

Awful Plight of French Peasants

Re-Captured Towns and Villages In France Were Rubbish.

So much has been said of Germany and the Germans that the mere sight of the word "German" in cold print makes one feel inclined to pass along in happier reading, but not without experiencing a cold shudder. Fortunately there are but few people left in Canada today who would openly put forward a plea for Germany on the grounds of learning and culture. This number would rapidly disappear were they given the opportunity of paying a visit to the western front to see for themselves the utter desolation the retreating German forces have left in their train. With all hope of victory gone the Hun seemingly puts himself out to pillage, burn and absolutely destroy every piece of territory he occupies previous to evacuation, believing, presumably, that the unchangeable sight of warren destruction will so depress the heart of his enemy as to force an earlier peace.
Harrowing narratives of German barbarism are published in "The French Wounded Emergency Fund Magazine," accounts which fairly take one's breath away. It discloses beyond doubt that the plundering and burning of French towns and villages is premeditated and a part and parcel of the German military programme. In this war of attrition only the aged, weak and babies in arms are left by the Huns to grapple with an unknown future, with not even a vestige of a home standing in the whole shettern area. The able-bodied men and women (these are of 14 years and upwards) have been deported to Germany—literally forced into bondage.
But what makes the saddest reading in the unfolding of one of the most gruesome stories of this war is the reference made to the young women who are left with Boche children in their arms to share the fate of the old and decrepit as it to remind them through life of German lust and tyranny. What a future for these poor unfortunate! The finger of scorn is even now pointed by the more fortunate progeny who will be expected to rebuild the future destinies of France.
An appeal for money is now being made the newspapers in behalf of The French Wounded Emergency Fund. This society was founded to render emergency relief to destitute and suffering dependents of French soldiers—to succour the wounded and to rehabilitate families in the recovered and devastated portions of France and has as its patron H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. The French Wounded Emergency Fund follows every advance on the Western Front, and endeavors to install a ray of hope in these poor people, who are almost unnum-bered, suffering to realize they are no longer under the heel of the oppressor.
It is entirely independent of any other organization and looks to charity for its support. It is under the authority of the French Government, and is the only organization undertaking this particular work of restoration. Judging from the names of the prominent people in Winnipeg and Western Canada who have identified themselves with the appeal for fund, a large measure of success should attend the effort. It is worthy of the support of every true citizen and it is to be hoped that a bumper sum of money will be realized. One thing certain: We must one and all now acknowledge the fact that "we must give something."

Keeping Work At Home

Distant pastures always look the greenest, and many buyers of printing are often fooled just as much when they buy product from a distance, as when the land prospector forms a resolution to buy from a glance at distant fields.

Why do merchants and manufacturers go from home with their printing orders? Why should they rid in the building up of other communities when their own section is in need of support and encouragement? These are problems that will not admit of a simple answer.

The distant printer's salesman visits a town and finds that in many merchants, bankers, lawyers and manufacturers there are buying their stationery in small quantities at reasonable—not to say low—prices. He at once talks price and quantity—that is, price on large quantities. Where the buyer has been ordering a single thousand copies of a job at, say $4.00, the salesman from the distant city quotes for 5,000 or 10,000 at about half this price, and the chances are that his samples are of a quality and finish superior to that which would be used in the execution of an order.

Should the local business man consult the home printer and talk the matter over freely with him, instead of rushing to the conclusion that the local printer had been "robbing me right along," he would generally find that in quantities he could buy just as well and often to better advantage by turning his work over to the home industry. Besides, he would be doing something towards circulating money among his fellow townsmen and enabling them the better to support him in return.

We believe there are very few buyers of printing nowadays who are utterly indifferent to the success of their fellow, especially those who have a "local habitation and a name" among them. As a rule they concede the printer's right to a fair profit, provided always they can be assured of a square deal.

Spree On Recruits

It would take some considerable time to write all the minor laughs which we have got at various times from "Spree," one of our section. For instance, I could tell you about the sinking of H.M.S. "Perkins," in which he dived with two more on a big thesaurus machine. It was a parody on the Six Brothers' Luck famous sketch.

Or I could tell you of the time when he was playing snow music on his comb and paper (for he is musical you know) while two more are acting this great drama.

Villain: "Will you marry me now?" Heroine: "No, I won't."

V.: "Then over the bridge your father goes."

H.: "Poor father." Splash. Bubble, bubble, etc.

V.: "Will you marry me now?" H.: "No."

V.: "Then over the bridge you go."

H.: "But, I can't swim."

V.: "Now is your time to learn."

Splash. Bubble, bubble, etc.

Now, "Spree" loudly breaks in with "Hail on the ocean wave." Loud cheering ensues.

Villain: "My heavens, who are you?"

Loud cheers: "Some of His Majesty's Jack Tars."

"Horray!" shrieks the audience.

"Caught at last!" gasps the Villain, and then curtain.

It was at this point when somebody upset him. "Before you came up!" he replied. "You are only a recruit in my eye." Now, an old soldier, would this be a clanking off and go, but "Spree's" tormentor turned round and enquired, innocent like, "What's a recruit?" So the rest of us joined in chorus, "What is a recruit, 'Spree'?"

This is his version:

"A recruit is chiefly known by his large pill box and prickly back hair. He is generally to be found in the vicinity of the coffee bar springing from bench to bench. His chief diet consists of wads and tea, which he consumes in large quantities. When hard pressed he will devour bath brick and greasy paste. When angry he will fly away to the woods and whistle pattering tunes to himself."

We laughed at this little satire, so he continued, "An old soldier is chiefly to be recognized by his well-worn campaigner and left arm (good clean stripes) which lounge wearily by his side. The chief diet is beer, which he also consumes in large quantities. He is chiefly to be found in the vicinity of the canteen rolling from bench to bench. When asked by a nookie to leave a beer he will immediately say 'Yes, tea.' As the evening rolls on he will be seen in a semi-conscious condition, trying to find his bondior. On finding same he will spontaneously go off to sleep underneath his bed."

Sill! "Spree" continues:

"A Pip Squeak is a very, very ferocious animal, which when fired makes many squeaky noises. It is chiefly found in the vicinity of the firing line, springing from trench to trench. Its chief diet consists of dug-outs; on entering same, squeaky noises will be heard, if occupants are still alive."

He was getting too tragic there, so we pulled him down and put him to bed, just as the orderly sergeant came down to kindly inform us that it was "Lights out."—H. Stovell.

Wedding Bells

MURRAY—DARRACH.

On Wednesday afternoon a pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Darrach, Alton apartments, when their sister, Katharine Isabel, formerly of the staff of the Blairmore public school, was united in marriage to Mr. Johnston Murray, of Frank, Alberta. The bride was dressed in pearl grey georgette crepe, and carried a large sheaf of roses. The drawing-room was tastefully decorated for the occasion with sweet peas and similar, and the bride entered on the arm of her brother, while Mrs. Faulkner played the wedding march. Rev. Mr. Rennie, pastor of the Bankview Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate friends of the bride. A dainty luncheon was served after which the happy couple left for Lake Louise and the coast cities. The bride traveled in a beautifully-tailored dark grey suit and purple hat. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Murray will reside at Frank, Alberta.—Calgary Albertan.

The King of Gods surveys the battered ground Where Afton's dauntless warrior brood are found. Some, in the arms of Morpheus recline, While others, Argus-eyed, watch o'er the line. A steady man appears without alarm. Three crooked bands of ribbon grace each arm. A vessel filled with liquid fire he bears. The potent draught that banishes all cares. The warriors in silence watch him come; Then joyful voices softly hail him: "Hurray!" O wondrous draught that with the sleep of Lethe Combines the glow of Sirius' burning breath. How many men bow down before thy throne, And armed with thee would cross the Styx alone. The leader bids the sleeping men arise. Who round him crowd with eager, anxious eyes.

An angry iron-accept o'er the leader's face. He gazed in wrath upon the man a space, As, mute in thought, he wondered what to say; Then, deeming words were useless, strode away. He reached his warm apartment 'neath the ground, So deep that of his men he heard no sound. A ponderous earthen jar lay on the floor; Which bore the mystic letters: "S. R. D."

Of with the cunning of Odysseus born, The subtle sergeant shows himself to scorn. The jar contains the remedy for care; The vessel holds full twenty times his share. The precious liquid fills the flowing bowl. He wondrous Bacchus with a fervent soul: Then he resigns himself to Somnus' sway. The watching warriors outside, silent, wait the day.

Confidence In Outcome Of War

Mr. Hoover Summarizes the Food Situation in the United States

Pressed by various journals of the country for a statement with regard to the pessimistic reports of the war situation, Mr. Hoover gave the following interview on reasons for confidence in the outcome of the war:

"No one can rightly be gloomy over the outcome of the war. The people in this war. Success in this war is a question of resources, and the will and ability of the people to organize themselves to use their resources rightly and to endure. Many thinking people in America, and throughout the whole world, have been watching anxiously the last four months in the fear that democratic America could not organize to meet autocratic Germany. Germany has been confident that it could not be done. Confidence is immediately at our door. Aside from the remarkable assemblage of our army and financial resources, we have already demonstrated their ability to mobilize, organize, endure, and prepare voluntarily to increase by billions in many directions and upon more word of inspiration.

"We entered the war four months ago and it was announced by the president that one of the great problems of the war would be food; that we must prepare to increase and to have our foodstuffs for a year in advance, not only for ourselves, but for our Allies. These figures have been no consequential national or local legislation, yet the greatest spontaneous volunteer effort ever made in history has supplied us with a larger stock of food supply as a result of patriotic planning in every quarter and waste is being eliminated out of every crack and cranny of our homes and of our industries.

"This is being accomplished by the force of the law, but by spontaneous effort and self-denial of the people. There have sprung up organizations throughout the United States, in every city, county, village and state, definite and purposeful, and practical in their ends and unflinching in their efforts, which have the will to solve food supply questions. The autocratic government could accomplish this. Germany accomplished less in twelve months than our people have done in four. The need of our legislation and authority is to curb those who would profit by this volunteer effort, and to make sure of all this lies in the fact that our present prospects indicate an increase of production of foodstuffs of 1,000,000 bushels. Our farmers planted an increased acreage of wheat, but the weather has not ruined the crop. New gardens have been planted or extended everywhere. We have increased supply of vegetables in our history.

"The wolf is at the door of Europe, and with all the surplus of our stock of foodstuffs would still have been too little for the demand upon us during the coming year if our people had not responded to the call for wise and economical use of food and for the elimination of waste. The response not only in planting, but also in conservation has been of such a spontaneous, magnificent order as to justify confident optimism of the ability of our people to prepare and to preserve. In the matter of our great surplus of perishables, because of our inability to ship these to our Allies, a call was sent out from Washington to the effect that our people should consume the perishables during the summer and fall months in substitution of staples which should be held for the winter, and for shipment to our Allies. They were asked to substitute waste of meat and fats by the use of substitutes. That this is being done is already evidenced by reports of dealers in cereals and in meats, which indicate a most remarkable decrease in demand for these commodities and an increased demand for substitutes. A call was also sent out asking that all perishables that could not be consumed should be preserved and stored. This call, pay, has met the response of millions of women in the country, not only in the matter of preserving in the household, but also by the creation of innumerable committees, clubs, demonstration trains and instructors provided by our education system throughout the country.

"Through that we are only half way through the canning season, we can begin to see magnificent results. It is obvious enough that the American women have not lost the household arts of her pioneer mother. Our American canners will this year produce about 1,700,000,000 cans of fruit and vegetables. Our government and the Allies will require about 200,000,000 of these cans. The returns we have from various state organizations based upon the results obtained for the first half of the season indicate that the American women will preserve 200,000,000 jars and cans of fruit and vegetables this year and will thus supply any deficiency called for by the armies. A few days ago we sent out a call to the women of the country that they should sign a pledge to us to accept our suggestions as to substitutes and waste elimination in their homes, so far as their circumstances would permit. Already we have over 2,600,000 high pledges on route to Washington, Philadelphia, leading with 250,000. St. Louis, for example, has had over 150 mass meetings of women in arrangement of the enrollment. There are 2,400 organized women in Virginia making a house to house canvass. We shall have the millions of homes in the United States, enrolled as members of the food administration, joining us in volunteer regulation within sixty days. This in response to a simple request and with no extended organization on our part, but in reliance upon the support of the women's committee of the council of national defense, state councils of defense, the multitude of existing women's organizations and the strong support of all the churches and fraternal organizations of the country. As soon as we can formulate the voluntary regulations, we shall ask for similar pledges from every public eating place and every trade in the country.

"The elimination of waste in the country has been most gratifying. The best index of this saving is in garbage returns from our large cities. We have the returns for the month of June from cities aggregating a population of 15,000,000, showing a reduction of their garbage by 32 per cent below the month of May. These figures are immediately tribute to the energy of American women, not only in the work of their homes, but in the organization of public opinion for the elimination of waste.

"If we make a broad survey of the country, we find every state spontaneously creating a definite and active food organization presided over by capable and devoted men and women who are sacrificing every interest in this national service. We find a network of sub-committees on the various phases of food production and distribution, and these are these re-duplicated by sub-committees in counties and municipalities. This is the organization of democracy, and it is a positive proof that at the call of national duty our people will rise and rise ever higher. It is the real defense of this country, for it ensures that the superior intelligence of our people, their capacity for organization and their power, will prove a wall that will withstand the best efforts of the Germans for the next five years, if it be not longer.

I recall that shortly before the war, a prominent German official who had spent some time in the United States, and who had a deeper appreciation than most Germans of what America's entry in the war would mean. His final remark to me after a long discussion was: 'I do not fear the American soldiers because they cannot arrive in time; that I fear is the intelligence, and devotion of 100,000,000 of original minds and people trained to a faith in the individual initiative. These people, now so materialistic in outward appearance, are stirred spiritually, that they is the day of Germany's doom.'

Christian Civilization In Manifest Peril

From an Address by Robt. Lansing, U.S. Secretary of State

My friends, I am firmly convinced that the independence of no nation is safe, that the liberty of no individual is secure, and that the peace of no world is possible, until the principles which hold the German people in the hollow of its hand has been broken, and the principles of justice, to moral obligation, to honor, no longer avail with such a power.

"To restore peace to the world, and that by becoming German imperialists by force of arms. For the sake of human liberty, this great republic is marshalling its armies and preparing with all its vigor to aid in ridding Germany, as well as the world, of the most ambitious and most unprincipled autocracy which has arisen to stifle the wheels of progress and imperil Christian civilization."

The Stones at Baalbek
A writer in the Christian Herald says that he had heard great stories about the pyramids, but that after seeing the stones at Baalbek, those of the great pyramids looked like children's building blocks. In the quarry is a stone on the upper surface of which a statue of a cavalry soldier could stand. It is squared on five sides, but not yet detached from the ledge.

The Arab legend is that a female giant was carrying the stone when she heard her baby cry. She dropped it, there, and no one has moved it since. If that is by had not cried for his mother, there would be today in the walls of the temple a stone 20 feet long and 15 feet square. Doubtless it will some day justify the assertion of work done upon it. At present it helps six hotels, a dozen cook shops, a score of nutcrackers and a station master.

A Smart Recruit
The officer of the day, during his tour of duty, paused to question a sentry who was a new recruit. "If you should see an armed party approaching, what would you do?" asked the officer. "Turn out the guard, sir!" "Very well. Suppose you saw a battleship coming across the parade ground, what would you do?" "Report to the hospital for examination, sir," was the prompt reply.

Absorbing Powers Of Dairy Products

Care Should Be Taken to Avoid Tainted Milk

Dairy products may well be compared to a sponge in their ability to absorb. Just as readily as the sponge takes up water, so milk, cream or butter take up odors and flavors. These may have gotten in before or after the milk was drawn. Good hay and grain are said to produce good milk. This is because the cows are desirable and not sufficiently strong to make themselves noticeable in the product. Carrots, onions, and a number of other vegetables growing in the Alps mountains give a peculiarly spicy odor and flavor to the milk of Swiss cows. Weeds taken into the cow's stomach will be noted plainly in the weedy flavor of her milk. This is especially noticeable in the fall and late summer when pastures are short. Any strongly flavored food is liable to make itself evident in the products of the animal.

After the milk is drawn if it is left standing in the stable for any length of time, it will absorb the various odors and flavors of the stable or feed. Milk set away in cisterns where fruit or vegetables are kept will readily take up their flavors. Kerosene or gasoline are especially easily absorbed and the hardest to get rid of after they have once left their taint. Almost anything which has a strong odor or flavor is liable to make itself felt on the condition of any dairy product with which it comes in contact.

The only sure way of having an untainted product is to feed only milkily flavored feeds and keep the stored products at all times in separate sampling places free from odors. C.A.G.

The Woolwich Arsenal

As against the 10,000 workers kept going in peace times, the Woolwich Arsenal now employs 100,000—a number which is growing still—and as this influx of population to the district does not increase the rate of consumption, the organization required to concentrate all labor and effort at the fullest pitch of efficiency has been nothing short of superhuman.

Canned Chicken

How to Can Chicken for Winter Use by the Straight Pack Method

"Canned chicken" may be made at home in your own kitchen out of the old hens that ought to be killed any day. The method of operation for what is known as "straight pack" by the trade is very simple, and is given in detail as follows by Dr. Robt. Barnes, chief of the meat and canned food division, health of animals branch, department of agriculture, Ottawa: Clean and cut up the chicken; sort out the fleshy portions, such as the legs, thighs and breast.

Break off the protruding portions of the bones in each piece. Pack these fleshy portions in a gem jar or other container, as closely as possible, and salt and pepper (about a teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper). Fill to within three-quarters inch of overflowing with the liquid that comes from the balance of the chicken, process for preparing which is given below. Place in hot or other vessel containing warm water, and gradually bring to a boil.

For pint jars boil two and a quarter hours; for quart jars boil three and a half hours. For the balance of the chicken, place in kettle and boil till the meaty part will strip freely from the bones; strip off all meat and pack in jar. Pour the liquid that has not been used in the first jar, if there is not enough liquid to fill the second jar add water. Place in boiler as above and boil as follows: For pint jars, one and three-quarter hours; for quart jars, two and a quarter hours.

If desired, the whole of the chicken may be prepared the same as the last part. In all cases take care not to expose the gem jars to a sudden change of temperature. Also, after the jars have cooled off, examine the tops to see that the covers are airtight.

During the cooking of the product, place the glass tops on the sliders, but do not fasten them. Any steam which may be generated will escape. As soon, however, as the process is finished fasten the tops securely.

Saving Young Stock

How One of the Great Food Wastes Can Be Prevented

If the food administrator shall have power to prevent slaughter of infantile domestic animals and will exercise that power, he can eliminate one enormous waste at a single blow. An enormous number of calves are slaughtered in this country annually. At present the prices of milk butter and cheese strongly tempt the owners of cows to dispose of calves as quickly as possible. Add to this the fact that a calf brings a higher price than ever before it becomes a practical certainty that thousands of them are doomed to an early death.

The effect of this practice is far-reaching. It prevents an absolutely necessary increase in the supply of milk cows, aids the high price raising of dairy products, checks the increase of livestock on the farms, which thus get too little fertilization, and thus works against grain production.

So, too, gratification of the appetite for "dies" breaks down the effort to swell the production of eggs and of mature marketable poultry. A fry weighing one pound, would weigh four or five pounds next year and might be an industrious producer of eggs. A heifer calf, worth $15 now, if of good type and quality, would probably be worth $75 a year hence, and would soon be a producer of milk.

But so the practice goes on. Though we have united for hundreds of years, in condemnation of the woman who slew the hen that laid for her the golden eggs every day, we are foolishly depriving ourselves of a gain which is day by day assured, actuated by the hope of getting it all in a lump. All is not gain that goes into the purse. Let the food administrator see what he can do with this, one of our greatest wastes.

Birds of a Feather

It is stated in the German Press that the many ex-convicts now serving in the German land and sea forces have become "right decent citizens" through doing their duty with the colors. Backsliders are rare and their offences slight. One man only received a reprimand for not doing earned promotion to sergeant. By assisted in the recent raid on a private savings bank, perhaps.

The Keeping Of Poultry

Free Handbook on the Keeping, Breeding and Raising of Poultry

A well-nigh perfect handbook on the keeping, breeding and raising of poultry, whether in a large way or a small way, has been issued by the Dominion department of agriculture. The title of the work is "Poultry Keeping in Town and Country," and its official title is Bulletin No. 89 of the division of poultry, the Dominion poultry husbandman, Mr. F. C. Lillford, being the author. In his introduction to the 48 pages of which the bulletin consists, Mr. Lillford points out that poultry is suited to all conditions, takes a small outlay to start an interest in, makes regular returns, finds a good market, is cheap to feed, can be made profitable as a side line, and then proceeds to describe the methods that should be followed, and the requirements in backyard farmyard or any other form of poultry-raising. With 70 appropriate illustrations, he deals with housing, feeding, choice of varieties, proper and profitable management, selection of birds for mating, hatching and rearing, marketing and in short, everything appertaining to poultry husbandry. As poultry-keeping is contributing not only to private gain in both pocket and health, but also to national industry, there should be an exceptionally wide demand for this bulletin, which can be had free by applying to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

For a Democratic Germany

Mr. Scheide mann Learns Something at Stockholm

The advantages of foreign travel for Germans are exemplified in the case of Philip Scheide mann, the Socialist leader. He returns from the Stockholm conference convinced that the only way to deliver Germany from the horrors of a fourth winter of war is the democratization of the empire.

"It was in Stockholm," he says in a two-column article in Vorwaerts, "that I finally accepted as my unshakable conviction that of which I had before been conscious—the thing cannot be achieved without the sweeping democratization of Germany." The thing to be achieved is the finding of a way out of this "endless murdering of nations."

More Germans ought to go abroad, a great many more, that is the only way they can learn the truth. Without the empire they are taught to believe that Germany is fighting for life against a combination of powerful nations. They are taught to believe that they have accomplished their purpose—Germany's only hope is "victory." Mr. Scheide mann says a new light is striking the spreading in Berlin. It is the fish of the fish.

Confidence Of The Allies

Nothing in Outlook to Warrant Belief That Germany Can Win

To believe that Germany can win this war would be to believe that our faith is empty; that all we have loved and believed and trusted in the past is a delusion. It is not believed and trusted by our fathers and grandfathers is now going into the melting pot. That barbarism is at last to prevail over civilization, and brute force to replace humanity and justice. That Germany can win this war is to cease believing in all that life holds for any of us.

Laws Differ In Countries

As To Nationality

Children Born In British Empire are British Despite Parents' Nationality

Which country does a man belong to? That of his father, say that in which he was born? asks Answers.

We know that an Englishman who marries a German becomes a German himself, but what of her children, or those of any other German born in this country?

At the present time this question is often discussed by people who hold opposite opinions on the subject, sometimes express their views with more force than logic.

These persons, for instance, who follow the nationality of the father are apt to argue on the lines of the old "cross-talk" conundrum: "Do you mean to say," he says, "that if a cat walks into a fish shop and has kittens, those kittens are fish?"

The theory, however, is not so simple as that. For if one is always of his father's nationality, it follows that the father is of the nationality of his father, and so on into the remote past.

Great Britain are very largely descended from Normans and Saxons and Danes—to mention only a few of the nations from which our race has sprung—it would follow that scarcely anyone would be entitled to call himself an Englishman if the rule held good.

Fortunately, however, it does not. A man's nationality depends upon the laws of the country in which he lives, but as different countries have different laws on the subject, it is natural that there should be a good deal of confusion about the matter.

You think it curious, perhaps, that it is wrong that the sons of Germans living in this country should be allowed to fight in our army, for the German law is that they are Germans. Quite so, but our law says that they are not. The law—not only of the United Kingdom, but of every other country—says that any child born within the dominions of King George is his subject, and that he is a British subject, and that he is a British subject.

The object of the German law is to keep the German race pure, and to prevent a large army, and has for its purpose the loss of many of her people. The object of our law is to keep the British race pure, and to prevent a large army, and has for its purpose the loss of many of her people.

But Germany is by no means the only country in which this law holds. It is something like it in Russia, Austria, and in nearly every country in Europe, with one most important exception. In the United States, Canada, and in practically all the other countries of the world, the law is that any child born within the dominions of King George is his subject, and that he is a British subject, and that he is a British subject.
